

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A voice synthesization method for only vocalizing character information that an audience wants to hear, when the audience receives character information transmitted via digital broadcasting. The method recognizes tags and character information contents included in character information transmitted via the digital broadcasting, and compares them with predetermined tags and character information which the audience set beforehand. The method determines whether the character information transmitted via the digital broadcasting should undergo voice synthesis, on the basis of comparison result.